

9.

One should stay with 'ihtiyat' with one's in-laws. This means being careful of what one says and of one's behaviour to them, as being considerate shows respect in front of one's in-laws and a person is recognised by his good behaviour.

10.

We should understand when associating with our in-laws that their relationship with our spouse is informal, whereas with ourselves it will be formal. This understanding stops us from thinking that our in-laws don't love us when they connect with us in a formal way. As there is much love hidden in this formal relationship.

There are classes taking place at Madrasah Qaasim ul 'Ilm where male adults learn selected surats from the Qur'an off by heart.

The surats include;

- Surah Yaseen
- Surah Alif Laam Meem Sajdah
- Surah Mulk
- Surah Waqiah

The course on average takes 6 months to complete.

The classes take place in the LE1 area / St Matthews area.

Classes takes place in groups and also on a 'one to one' basis.

There are also 'online' classes taking place for adults who find travelling to the Madrasah difficult because of distance or a disability.

For more information or to enrol for classes, please contact :
07787 227167

Madrasah Qaasim ul 'Ilm
44 Montreal Road - St Matthews
LE1 2GS - Leicester - England - UK
Mobile / WhatsApp : 07787 227167
Email : al_qaasim@yahoo.co.uk

10

Important Points Regarding Marriage

By
Mawlana Umar Farooq Qaasim

1.

Normally, couples acquire better relationship habits as the years of their marriage increase. To give up at an early stage of marriage is not wise, as relationship skills mature as the years of marriage increase.

To understand this, we can see through common-sense that the couple that have been married for 40 years will have better insight of each other's habits than the couple who have only been married for a couple of years.

2.

Marital advice should be taken from those who are wise, sincere, love us, are available and whose guidance saves our marriage. Taking advice from the wrong people can make one lose his / her marriage.

3.

Sabr and tolerance has to be done in one's marriage for a marriage to flourish. The more sabr a person does, the more successful one will be in life.

4.

Spend on each other as this creates love. Also, say salam to each other as this creates love. Also, pray for each other as this creates love.

5.

Take the spouse away on holiday and try to have a good time in each other's company. Shared memories like going on Umrah together keeps a relationship strong.

6.

Once a discussion with one's spouse leads to an argument, nothing will be heard or understood correctly. For this reason, have discussions in soft and moderate tones.

7.

One should not delay in having children, as children have been created by Allah to have features, facial and otherwise, of their parents. So, a child may have a mother's hand or a father's eyes. As children are innocent, natural love for the spouse will grow when one spends time with one's children, as the children will remind the couple of each other.

8.

One should participate in spiritual experiences with one's spouse, whether by going for Hajj together or going to an Islamic programme together.